CHARGING

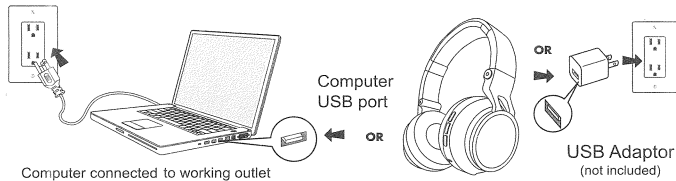

Your Bluetooth headphones operate on a built-in rechargeable battery. Although the battery has been fully charged, it can lose power even during periods of non-use. Make sure to charge the battery before using the headphones for the first time.

To charge the battery, connect the larger plug of the included USB charging cable to the powered USB port of a computer or a USB/AC adapter and then connect the smaller plug to the USB charging port on the side of the right ear cup.

The Charging Indicator will glow red while the headphones are charging. The indicator will turn solid blue when the headphones are fully charged and ready to use.

When fully charged the battery should provide up to 20 hours of talk time or music playing time at a normal listening level. If operated at maximum volume the music playing time will be reduced.

NOTE: While charging, the headphone power will turn off to conserve battery power and minimize charging time.
